

Today, your Negotiating Committee met to receive the Company's second proposal. Each of the three groups involved received a variation of Lockheed's amendments, or rather separate proposals based on location. The decision to do this was made solely by Lockheed Martin.

“There is definitely not enough movement in the Company's second counteroffer. Based on what they have passed across the table at this point, it leads us to believe that they are not serious about reaching an agreement. This is unacceptable for the Machinists at this table and for those we are representing back home,” said the IAM/LMT Negotiating Committee.

Throughout the evening and early tomorrow morning, all three groups will go over the separate proposals and begin constructing an amended offer to present to the Company. Each individual proposal can be viewed at www.iamlockheed.com.
